"At times like this – during the coronavirus pandemic – we at Malvern Bank believe it is especially important to not only 'buy local' to support our community, but to 'give local,' too," said Anthony C. Weagley, Malvern Bank's President and CEO. "The four organizations to which we've donated represent the best of our community – supporting local tourism and entertainment; providing for the safety of our citizens and animals; and stimulating and encouraging a variety of art forms. We are proud to help these organizations to achieve their missions, and we encourage others in the community to support our local institutions.

"For the remainder of the year, Malvern Bank is identifying those organizations that need assistance with COVID as part of our focus to support the community in as many ways as we can."
